THE BEST Photoplay Department in WASHINGTON

Thrill-Made Dramas to Give Way to Drama-Made Thrills

The thrill as the chief feature is losing caste in the photoplay, according to some of the best known producers and authors. The thrill, they declare, is like a lurid posterits effect in but momentary. What the producers are now trying to secure are film plays that will carry big emotional appeals and will gradually create tension in the audience by reason of dramatic sequence of

When J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Vitagraph Company, was in Washington a short time ago, he made some interesting observations regarding the thrill as a business compeller. He thought the day of the thrill had passed; that is, the day of the thrill simply as a thrill. He declared that when a photoplay has a thrill nowadays it must be because it belongs in the play, and is reached through a series of inci-dents that prepares the audience, that works on the emotions of the

"I think the day when the photoplay director secured his thrilling scene by accident and then built a scenario around it has gone," he declared. "We have had one or two plays of that sort in the course of our work. We found a big wreck or a thrilling accident which we photographed, and then set our scenario department to work on it.

"We had an interesting experience with one film of that kind—a real thriller and real properties with which to work it. The film was a success of a certain kind. It commanded attention because it was well act-'I think the day when the photocess of a certain kind. It commanded attention because it was well acted and superbly photographed. But its story was inherently weak, it failed absolutely to salisfy us as a photoplay. And I don't believe we want to try the experiment again. "I know it has been a common experience for directors to do that sort of thing. Really they were compelled by the demand for new plays, to revert to such methods. No one outside of the film business can realize the demand that is made can realize the demand that is made for big meledramatic productions.

We do the best we can with material on hand. Of course what I have said relates to the past of the film.
"We were compelled to greate our."

"We were compelled to create our own standards, educate our di-rectors and our actors. There was nothing like the photoplay, and no-body knew what to do or how to do it. We have educated them. I don't believe that there are any better forms of dramatic entertainment than the plays that are now being than the plays that are now being turned out—not alone by my company but by others. And I feel certain that our plays are well put together and well acted. And that the plays themselves are complete and satisfying productions."

In view of Mr. Blackton's statements it is interesting to learn the ideas of the latest recruit in the ranks of the photoplaywrights, Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, who as a dramatist is well known through the country. Dr. Goodman is the author of several successful plays on the stage, and he has recently been engaged by the Lubin Company to write them a series of photoplays.

"To my mind the flowering of the evolutionary process in motion pictures has brought about a change so far as the mounts of the mounts of the manufacturing of the change so far as the mounts of t evolutionary process in pictures has brought change, so far as the manufacturing end is concerned, in the usual or-der of stunt pictures and dramatic climaxes." Dr. Goodman says. "Today we ind the audiences tired of the physical stunts, jumping over cliffs, hair-breadth escapes from moving trains, etc. I have watched faces in a moving picture audi-ence, and noted the fact that a face will desict suppressed. will depict surprise, or norror, or emotional tenseness in direct pro-portion to the emotional value contained within the picture. I will illustrate what I mean by saying, whereas an auditor is held spellbound for from three to five sec-onds by a plunging automobile, which fact only surprises him and is not emotional, he is held for an indefinite period by the working out of a dramatic situation which catches at his heart-strings and his mind.

"This is the new order. The primal influence upon peorle is through their understanding and on their their understanding and on their emotions rather than by blatant sounds against their e r-drums or by some terrifying thing which affects only their vision. There is a conviction within me that within one year not a picture over one reel in length will have a stunt of the physical kind in it. This means better stories on the part of the manufacturing concerns to meet the manufacturing concerns to meet the higher and more intelligent demands of the moving picture audiences."

Fasting Girl Hides to Avoid Curious Visitors

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Miss Dora Krasher, of 417 Cross street, after fasting for six weeks in an effort to cure herself of a persistent stomach allcure herself of a persistent stomach allment, has left the city for a few days to continue her fasting in seciusion. According to her friends, after her picture appeared in a newspaper, she was loath to go out of the house on account of the curious stares of inquisitive people, and she was annoyed by the numerous visitors to her home.

For six weeks Miss Krasher's only nourishment was water and a little beef broth every few days. She lost about twenty-five pounds, was in excellent spirits, although a little weak. She said she felt greatly improved. he felt greatly improved.

Mules Have Been Mates For Twenty-Light Years

HILLSDALE, Mich., Aug. 27.-Probably there is not a team in the State which has quite the record of the span of mules owned and arizen by E. B NNoves, for these animals have been in continuous road service for twentyeight years, and they will be thirty-one years old their next birthdays. They recently celebrated the anniversary of their twenty-eight years of service. They have practically never been driven by any one except the owner, and they have never been driven out of his sight but once. Most people are not courageous enough to want to drive them, as they have run away over fifty times. Driving them is, therefore, not a monotonous undertaking.
